JOHN WRIGHT, PROSPEROUS FARMER WAYLAYED AND MORTALLY WOUNDED BY TWO WOULD-BE FRIENDS—SUCKERS LATER TO HIS WOUNDS IN LOCAL SANITARIUM.

One of the most brutal crimes craning the criminal records of Dallas county was perpetrated last Friday night at Carrollton, where John Wright, a prosperous Colored farmer was struck and mortally wounded by two of his false friends. He was rushed to St. Paul sanitarium where it was revealed that his skull was crushed and succumbed at 5 o'clock Saturday morning as a result of his wounds.

Wright it is alleged was en route to Dallas and was to have been accompanied by these two supposed friends, in leaving the house there were three persons beside Wright before reaching the Interurban depot the third party stopped at a restaurant while the remaining two proceeded with Wright. They stood on the front platform of the depot while in meantime the two friends went to the rear of the building and there the plot against Wright's life was hatched.

Following a humorous conversation in the rear by the two, Wright left the front for the rear where his would-be friends were to point the fun and as they saw him coming, secreted themselves and as he passed struck the fatal blow.

Wright is said to have been very prosperous farmer having gathered all of his product save a couple of bales of cotton.

He was a brother of Mrs. Mary Sterling, 2424 Federal street.

NEEDHAM ROBERTS THRILLS THE VAST AUDIENCE WHO HEARS THE SIMPLE, BUT GRAPHIC AND HEROIC DEEDS OF EXPLOITS IN NO MAN'S LAND.

He is Disemboweled and with Dangling Intestines and Shattered Arm Holds the Line and Puts the Enemy to Flight.

It is rarely the high privilege of an audience to hear the exploits of a hero related by his own mouth in person, and to listen to the very words as they fall from his lips in graphic narration. But this was the case of the exploits told in a simple story by an American soldier on last Wednesday evening in the Pythian Temple before an audience of about nine hundred persons, who captured before start to finish with a vivid narration of the chivoric and blood curdling deeds of two American soldiers on a foreign land, doing the duty of the government of the United States, entrusted with that high duty imposed upon them to see to it that the enemy of Democracy should not pass through No Man's Land to endanger or capture important position of the great armies that were battling to make the world safe for Democracy, where the highest confidence is imposed and entrusted on a few men stationed in the night to watch, to feed, without food, without drink, without protection, lying in shell holes, reposing among unburied corps, hiding and endeavoring to conceal themselves from the view of the enemy, but the inevitable must come at some time, and it came to the two men told by the commanding officers to do their duty or report to God the reason why. They stood in No Man's Land, and as the simple story related in burning words by Needham Roberts, whose exploits of that night are now recorded in the memory of his countrymen and recorded in a simple story that the future historian will be glad to weave a chapter of evergreen to emboss these wonderful acts, and the poet with frenzied zeal, will repeat in lays of the brightest gems, and the sculptor will give touches to the silent marble to express the story imperfectly told by the man and hero whom all who love their country, will honor, and even rever and repeat the story in tradition to latest posterity. We can never forget the impression made on our minds by the graphic and heroic story of that night; how that two American Negroes grapple with the enemy, grappled in the throes of death, grappled in the grip for American institutions, grappled for your flag and my flag, grappled for your children and my children, and not that but for the flag of old England, the land of the mighty power, a world's power, and for her children, and for her land, for her mothers, and for institutions, and neither is this all, what more can we say? But for bleeding France, her women insulted, outraged, her mighty institutions bombarded, shell torn, her arts despoiled, her children driven for shelter, for bread, for clothing, and made orphans, and the signs of hope almost gone, but Needham Roberts and Henry Johnson, two American soldiers, gave new inspiration, gave new and confirmed hope to the fast falling and torn and devastated France. Such is seems incredible, but such is the logic of war, such was the tide that these two Negroes made immortal, turned back and set the whole civilized world a new record of the exploits of many deeds. Are heroes born? Are born to accomplish certain things in the annual of history? Two men without education in that sense of which we speak of education, who were called to duty, and they must do or die. Well, he did his duty, and the number of the dead lying round the place of encounter told the story better than the lad who turned back the German raiders, and made safe the front trenches of the Allied armies that lay back of the place made sacred with heroic deeds that can never die, but grow brighter as the ages recede and paint them with undying glory to be related in son and story to latest generations in America, in England, in France and even in the Father land and to all generations, a story will be worth while.

The following program was carried out in connection the lecture of Sergeant Needham Roberts: Negro National Anthem. Invocation, Dr. A. S. Jackson; son, "Battle Hymn of the Republic," instrumental solo, Mrs. Portia W. Pittman; Vocal Solo, Ruby Pollard; Introduction of speaker, Hon. A. S. Wells; Address, Sergeant Needham Roberts; Vocal Solo, Mrs. Nedline Carter Hawkins.

A GREAT DAY AT CUNEY.

Your correspondent ran across our old friend, Hon. H. L. Price, president of the new town, Cuney, Texas, and finding him all smiles, we inquired the cause of his unusual jollity. Again smiling, he said notwithstanding the short crops and excessive rains the people are flocking to Cuney as never before. Mr. A. H. Henry from the Pine Grove settlement just closed a deal through me today for a fine river bottom farm near Cuney. Mr. Sterling Nelson is unloading a carload of lumber and will build a fine seven room bungalow upon the hill near town. Mr. Tommie Ewell from Frankston, finished moving to Cuney and opened his new market in time to have a fat cow for the brood of Prof. Jno. L. Hamilton was elected the third teacher in the Cuney high school. When the west bound train pulled into Cuney we thought we saw the host that John saw, but upon investigation we found it represented the four cross families from Upshar county. These are the families of Edmund, Cross, Ed Cross, consisting of some 25 people. As these people marched through the streets of Cuney, we were made to think that if our people all over the south could see as their people are seeing, we would soon have a population of 10,000 people with our own city, court, city judge, policemen, city marshal, banks, mills, factories and business institutions of all kinds employing hundreds of our own sons and daughters to work in these various business houses. But this is not all, on Sunday morning the town of Cuney people was awakened by the squealing of hogs, the baying of hounds and the howling of crows. Going down to the station we found four cars loaded to overflowing with live stock, feed and household goods. These four cars belonged to the Cross families just mentioned. These cars were loaded and these people are now citizens of our community. Mr. Givens and Mr. Scott of Kennard, are here looking for location for next year. There is a great awakening among our people and the tide is turning our way. The Negro is beginning to see that he must have something of his own and that he must depend upon himself.

The town of Cuney was organized by H. L. Price about two and one half years ago to demonstrate the fact that the Negroes can build, own and operate a town of their own. While we have had to go up against the war with all of its disadvantages and the high cost of living, we have kept our head above the waves and are making slow, but steady progress. We have three grocery stores, one dry goods store, one drug store, one hotel, a restaurant, one blacksmith shop, one meat market, three grist mills, one gin, one shingle mill, one postoffice, one Notary Public, one land agency, one realty company, one news agency, one cotton and cotton seed buyer, two churches, a good school, several dealers in gum blocks and cord wood.

There are hundreds of opportunities here awaiting the man or woman who has the courage to join in with us and the patience to wait a few days for results.

It seems that a brighter day is dawning for Cuney and we are expecting great things for future.

JUST A WORD.
